FEATURES

ALA Midwinter Issue

Guest Editor, John McDonald (California Institute of Technology)

Introduction	1	readers with a straightforward analysis of online journal usage developments worldwide to date and in the years to come.
by John McDonald — Although libraries have rarely relied solely on quantitative measures to inform their day-to-day actions, the increases in serials costs and the decreases in real budget dollars are forcing libraries to make tougher and tougher collections decisions each year.
Making Haste Slowly: E-metrics — Where Are We Now and What Can We Expect?	18
by Bob Molyneux — Bob says that we know a lot more than we think we know if it were all collected and assessed.
Bradford's Distribution, the 80/20 Rule, and Patterns of Full-Text Database Use	20
by Steve Black & Amy Sisson — Unlike the pattern of use of print journals in specific disciplines found by Bradford, the heaviest use in interdisciplinary database packages is spread among dozens, rather than a handful, of titles.
Why Usage Statistics Cannot Tell Us Everything, and Why We Shouldn't Dare To Ask!	24
by Phil Davis — While usage statistics can tell us so much about how much a journal or resource is being used, it cannot tell us why it was used, or by whom. The answer to these questions may have unintended consequences for library budgets.
Evaluating Bibliographic Database Use: Beyond the Numbers	26
by Steve Hiller — A number of libraries find that use of many bibliographic databases is on the decline. So how do we measure use? How accurate and reliable are the data?
Usage Statistics at Yale University Library	32
by Jennifer Weintraub — Yale's collection of usage statistics, while perhaps not as comprehensive as would be liked, is a step in the direction of being able to tell what users want and need.
Getting the Best Out of It! Usage Analysis from the Publishing Perspective	34
by Marthyn Borghuis — Marthyn presents
Letters to the Editor	6
Deadlines	6
The Beginning of Value Assessment: Usage Information in the E-Journal Age	36
by John Sack — The early days of e-journals were like the early days of space exploration: we didn't know what observations would be useful because we didn't know what new phenomena in user behavior would occur. Clearly, significant challenges and "interesting" times are ahead for us!
Information Services and Use: Metrics & Statistics for Libraries and Information Providers: Update on NISO Committee AY	42
by Denise Davis — NISO Committee AY is now making final edits to Z39.7-2002, Information Services and Use: Metrics & Statistics for Libraries and Information Providers —Data Dictionary, and expects to complete its work by the end of 2003.
COUNTER: Progress though Cooperation	44
by Peter Shepherd — It is in the interests of both librarians and vendors that online usage statistics should be credible, consistent, and compatible. It is the object of COUNTER to ensure that this is so, without imposing an expensive bureaucracy on the industry.
Op Ed — Opinions and Editorials ...	46
To Thine Own Self Be Dispassionate by Bob Schatz — Matt Nauman's thoughtful editorial in the September ATG raised many points worth considering. Exhibitions at major (and minor) conferences have real and substantial costs which can affect the finances of vendors.
Back Talk — Profession Confusion ..	94
by Anthony (Tony) W. Ferguson — Tony thinks that we seem to be having another attack of profession confusion at just the wrong time. He was recently at an international meeting of librarians all of whom share an organizational affiliation that had the dreaded L word in it: Librarians.
